

The measures that matter to Culture and creativity

Continued investment in culture

Government will continue investing in the cultural sector and the preservation of Malta's cultural heritage, supporting the wider ecosystem in which artists, cultural organisations and creative businesses operate.

Existing schemes to continue

Government confirmed that schemes operating during the current year will be renewed, including support measures across their respective sectors. Creative and cultural operators should therefore continue monitoring the schemes relevant to their activities.

Digitalisation and technology

Malta Enterprise support will continue to target digitalisation, automation and higher-value investment, creating opportunities for creative businesses investing in technology and more innovative operating models.

Small-company tax reduction

Companies with turnover not exceeding €1 million may benefit from a new 25% corporate tax rate instead of 35% on profits retained or reinvested, subject to the detailed rules and conditions. Distributed profits remain subject to the 35% rate.

Tourism and culture remain interconnected

Government's tourism strategy will place greater emphasis on higher-quality tourism and the shoulder and winter months, potentially reinforcing the role of Malta's cultural and creative offering within the wider visitor economy.

Our take on the budget

The Budget continues to position culture, creativity and technology as contributors to a higher-value Maltese economy, with the strongest opportunities arising where creative businesses combine cultural output with investment, digitalisation and sustainable commercial growth.
